Headline:
On the cloudy side overnight, gradually brightening up Saturday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Mainly dry during the evening and overnight, although encroaching cloud from the north is likely to bring local mist and the odd spot of drizzle, mainly in the west. Very mild given the increasing cloud cover. Light winds. Minimum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Saturday:
Probably a rather cloudy and locally damp, misty start, however cloud should develop breaks, allowing some warm sunny intervals to develop, perhaps most likely later on in the south. Maximum temperature 24 deg C (75 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Fine at first Sunday, eventually sparking a risk of isolated thunderstorms. Becoming windier later, ahead of a more unsettled, cooler and more showery start to the working week.
